

Oxford-style debates – Supporting information

Students engage in debates around a strategic YES/NO decision that a committee may need to make when facing a challenging shift in the economic environment. A topic is assigned to a group of six students, and within each group, three students consolidate arguments for or against the decision in 3 propositions and oppositions. Each student therefore presents and arguments one proposition or opposition, and groups are eventually allowed to advance closing remarks following discussion with the audience. Finally, the audience votes for or against the decision. Each debate lasts up to 45 minutes.
